WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 7, 1874. The Post Office Department-Increase Compensation to Letter Carriers-The Murder of Mail Route Agent Ivey-The Contract for Penknives Cancelled.

The Post Office Department is about substituting for the old mail locks now used upon street boxes free delivery system new combination cks. Each city or district will be furnished with ocks upon a different combination, so that the keys of one city will be of no use in another. Each key will be numbered, and the carrier receiving it responsible for its custody and proper use. The question of increased compensation to letter carriers will shortly be considered by Postmaster General Jewell, and such allowance made as the appropriation will justify. Since the murder of Ivey, mail route agent on the Alabama and Chat tanooga Railroad, several route agents in the Bouth have shown considerable alarm and are asking leaves of absence from the Post Office Department, and some decline to run any longer on their routes.

Postmaster General Jewell has ordered cancelled the contract for penknives which have been usually issued to the clerks about New Year's. The custom obtained when quills were used for writing and a knife was a positive necessity, and has een kept up since the introduction of steel and gold pens to the present time.

OBITUARY.

Frederick B. Conway, the Actor. At thirty minutes past one o'clock yesterday morning Frederick R. Conway, the actor and theatrical manager, died in the quiet little town of Manchester, Mass. He was born in Manchester, England, in the year 1819, and was therefore fiftyfour years of age at the time of his death. He had been in ill health for three years past, but had recently greatly recovered, so that his early return to the stage, which he had so frequenly graced, was expected by his host of admirers. In 4ced, so satisfied was he himself that he had overcome the malady from which he had so long suffered that he was announced to appear at the Brooklyn Theatre on the 5th of the coming month. It was his intention on his reappearance to take the part of Edward Mildmay in "Still Waters Run Deep," one of his strongest characters. Mr. Conway was originally intended for the Church, and to this end was educated at Oxford University. His father, William Augustus Conway, was a celebrated tragedian, equally well known on both sides of the Atlantic, and the enwable fame he acquired enamored the son of the profession, so that he early abandoned the idea of the ministry and determined to follow in his father's footsteps. His earlier struggles were in no way different from those of other young actors. As early as 1851 he had acquired a good standing on the English stage. In 1847, when he was but twenty-seven years of age, he was supporting Miss Helen Faucit at Dublin. From Dub in to London is but a step for years of age, he was supporting Miss Helen Faucit at Dublin. From Dub in to London is but a step for an actor, and having justified the expectations of his iriends he was transferred to the Princess' Theatre, London, of which the renowned and beautiful Mine. Vestris was manager. Here Mr. Conway remained until 1851, when he came to America, and appeared on the 19th of August of that year, in conjunction with Mesers. Davidge, Scharl and the Misses Anderton and Gougenheim at the Broadway Theatre, just then reopened by Mr. Marshall.
The initial performance was the "School for Scanface. During the season he essayed the charleters is Hamiet, Macbeth, Othelo, Claude Meinotte, Captain Absolute and Doricourt, in all of which he was eminently successful. Tragedy and hight comedy were equally congenial to him, and he soon beman an established favorite. He also appeared in Baker's "Betrothal" as count Juranio, in the "Stranger" with Miss Charlotte Cushman, and in the "Husband of My Heart" as the Count de Fronsac. With the American people, particularly with the citizens of New York, he became a contemporary favorite with McKean Buchanan and Miss Charlotte Cushman; sustaining leading characters to the entire satisfaction of crowded audiences and of tir. Marshall, then the lessee of the old Broadway Theatre. During his first season here he married Miss Sarah Crocker. In 1854 he and his wife went to Philadelphia, where he played one season, at the conclusion of which the two joined Edwin Forrest, forming the most excellent combination that the American tragedan was ever at the head of. For a number of seasons Mr. Conway travelled through the country, sharing the applause with Forrest. So warmiy did he commend bination that the American tragedian was ever at the head of. For a number of seasons Mr. Conway travelled through the country, sharing the applause with Forrest. So warmly did he commend himself to the tragedian that at the close of a long engagement at the Park Theatre, succeeding the famous divorce case, Mr. Forrest took occasion to publicly acknowledge that "Mr. Conway was the best support he had ever had." Mr. Conway and his wife then essayed, with great success, several starring tours, which continued until 1884. They obtained a manuscript of the "Peep o' Day," and De Waiden adapted the "Guide of the Alps," for them and also "Rosaine," After this he rented the Park Theatre in Brooklyn, and on the night of the 2d of April, 1364, threw open the doors upon "ingomar, the Barbarian." The struggle for recognition and place among the good people of the City of Churches was long and severe; but success came at length. His resithabiling fast, he was compelled two years ago to reinquish active participation in the management of the Hrooklyn Theatre and retirs to his country residence at Manchester, Mass., where he died. His remains will be buried in Greenwood.

Wm. Mooney, thirty-seven years of age, was taken to the Park Hospital on Saturday alternoon last and died there on Sunday evening. He was perfectly unconscious from the time of entering the hospital, and the cause of his death is said to have been a too frequent use of alcoholic drinks. He had no home. The body was sent to the Morgue, and the Coroner notified to hold an inquest.

The latter was given and a "full house" was the result. Instead of adhering to their agreement with the church, however, the exhibitors "loided their tents like the Arabs, and as silently stole away" to an adjoining village whither they were rollowed by Constable Deveau, who by virtue of an attachment sued out by one of the trustees of the Catholic church, took chappe of the goods and

Salem county are becoming alarming. The po-tatoes are not only attacked, but also the toma-toes and egg plants. Farmers say they have ploughed up eggs of this plague, in some instances, a toot under ground, and they fear the attacks of the insect will be on the increase next year.

A respectable resident of Hammonton, Atlantic county, named Galbreath, while sitting at the supper table with his family recently had a narrow escape from being murdered. Two shots were fired from a musket by some unknown miscreant, who had taken aim from a position outside the dweiling, the ball from one discharge striking Mr. Galbreath on the shoulder, without, however, in-flicting any serious injury.

For the past two weeks fires have been raging flercely in the woods to the east and northeast of Hammonton, Atlantic county. It requires the united efforts of the citizens in the neighborhood to save their farms from destraction. In consequence of the earth being so learifully dry, the fire burned down into it in many places to the extent of a loot or more, and ploughing had to be resorted to to prevent the fire from running through the ground. It is estimated that from 15,000 to 20,000 acres have been burned over, and unless there is a fail of rain soon the fire will last as long as there is anything for it to feed upon. Valuable cedar timber in immense quantities has disappeared in smoke, and the track of the devouring element presents a picture of much desolation. It is the prevalent opinion that this destruction owes its origin to the work of some individual actuated with malicious intent. In the neighborhood of Old Columbia, Pleasant Mills and Elwood the fire is raging with increased fury. united efforts of the citizens in the neighborhood
